SFP News

The first several weeks of 2018 have moved so quickly that we decided an update was in order before we see many of you in Boston next week. Activities related to our Target 75 campaign are gaining steam. We've released three sector reports on squid, octopus, and fresh and frozen tuna in the past weeks. Each outlines the work needed to move those sectors toward sustainability. As the campaign progresses, you'll see updates on these sectors and several others, along with stories about our efforts with partners and the industry to make improvements that move us closer to our goal.

We're also getting more companies to commit to the Ocean Disclosure Project. Canada's Albion Farms and Fisheries recently joined the ODP and the company's VP and Chief Sustainability Officer, Guy Dean, shared his experience with project in a recent blog.

Our outreach through events continues to inform stakeholders in new regions. We recently held a fisheries forum in Mexico City for companies and other stakeholders involved in sustainable seafood in Latin America. A forum will also be held for European audiences in May in Elche, Spain. You can learn more about SFP events here.

We appreciate how many of you continue to follow us on social media (see links below). Please continue to provide us with feedback on our programs and publications. It's always good to hear from you.

Sincerely,

Jim Cannon

CEO of Sustainable Fisheries Partnership
